

Recovery Talk, October 2010

Recovery Talk, hosted by veteran journalist Robyn Leary, is WDFH's pioneering half-hour program dedicated to resilience in recovery. The show focuses on health and medical topics, new science technologies, advances in trauma research, public policy, addiction treatment, recovery advocacy, veterans' affairs, family courts, anti-violent-crime strategies, domestic violence resources, and more.

- Listen online now at Online Audio (new editions are typically posted every Tuesday evening or Wednesday).
- Subscribe to podcast (free) — enter this address in your podcatching software to have your computer automatically download each news episode (free):

<http://wdfh.org/recoverytalk.xml>

More podcasting info...

Recovery Talk this week:

Tuesday evening, October 26 — 6:30-7:00 p.m.

Saturday morning, October 30 — 9:30-10:00 a.m.

Putting a face on recovery

Faces and Voices of Recovery (FAVOR) has been amplifying the voices of communities in recovery from alcohol and other drugs since 2001. A national grass roots recovery advocacy group based in Washington, D.C., FAVOR has played a significant role in changing public perception about addiction recovery, changing public policy, and changing discriminatory laws.

On this edition of Recovery Talk, Robyn Leary explores the Recovery Bill of Rights and the national sea change regarding the faces of recovery with FAVOR's Executive Director, Pat Taylor.